Inspiration:

Entwine is a table made of flat two dimensional sheets of Indowud that get linked into one another to form a more complex three dimensional object. The sheets can be disassembled and reused so as to minimize wastage of material.

By using black and red together on different surfaces of the same sheet, we have tried to explore how the flat geometry could gain multi faceted properties when manipulated with something as simple as a coloured finish. The same sheet template has been deliberately used in different sizes to depict how simple manipulation of scale in an object can render it structurally and aesthetically pleasing.

This table celebrates the idea of how two seemingly flat entities can come together beautifully and be interwoven to create a framework that can actually be used as part of our day-to-day lives as a functional object.
